Application Services Library (ASL)

ASL

The Application Services Library (ASL) offers a framework for the organization of Application Management. Application Management concerns the management of the control, the maintenance and innovation of applications (application programs and the database structures) which is industrially well considered.

In the Application Services Library you find:

- Generic process descriptions of all ASL processes, with in it a description of the in- and output of the processes, the activities within the processes, the mutual relations between the processes and the roles of persons involved (tasks, competences, responsibilities)
- Templates of important documents like annual plans, control plans, Service Level Agreements, files, arrangements, procedures, et cetera
- A (standard) set arrangements for reportings with examples of the numeral filling-in used for this(metrics)

The Public Domain standard for application control ASL has been developed by PinkRocade.

ASL Foundation

The exam for the Foundation Certificate in Application Management (ASL Foundation) tests the theoretical basic knowledge of ASL. Passing the ASL Foundation exam means you have knowledge and insight in:

- the ASL context
- the ASL content and structure
- the ASL application

Target group

The examination for the ASL Foundation Certificate is intended for people working with application control in daily practice: application controllers, functional and technical designers, programmers, test workers, team and project managers.
